THE PLATFORMS

THE candidates of the Democratic and Silver parties of Nevada are now before the people as a fusion ticket, and they stand upon what is essentially a fusion platform. Each of these parties adopted its own declaration of principles. These declarations differ slightly in matters of detail, and much in phraseology, but very little in substance. Both are strongly for free coinage of silver. The mode of statement is conservative and dignified, but there is no weakening in Nevada's demand upon this question. The specific endorsement of the Kansas City money plank in itself definitely settles the status of the Democracy of Nevada; but this is reinforced by a detailed statement which leaves nothing in doubt. So far as the Silver party is concerned it needed no platform declaration upon silver. Like Bryan, it is a platform in itself. But it has a declaration in favor of free coinage which is absolutely unequivocal and which cannot possibly be misunderstood.

Each party demands legislation for the curbing of the Trusts, and the modification of the tariff so as to prevent these cornerstones of business from over-charging the American consumer. Upon imperialism, bank currency, labor and all matters of local import the two parties are in perfect accord. But aside from this the candidates of both parties have strongly and unreservedly endorsed both platforms; so that for the purpose of the campaign the two platforms are to be considered as one. Hence they should be read together, and the one taken to reinforce the other wherever reinforcement is necessary.

The Democratic platform is rather more elaborate than that of the Silver party, and it is certainly one of the most comprehensive and forceful ever presented by any party to the voters of Nevada. It cannot be satisfactorily reviewed within the limits of an editorial of reasonable length. It should be read and studied by the voters themselves. It has been most carefully drawn, and while its arraignment of the Republican party is unsparing, the arraignment is couched in dignified language, and better still, is fully sustained by the record which that party has made.

Its flaying of Stewart is probably the most severe ever administered by any political party in this country to one who was once a trusted public official of high rank. No one seems to question the justice of the castigation, but a few have expressed the opinion that Mr. Stewart comes too near being a political corpse to merit any notice whatever. This would be eminently true if not for the circumstance that he has suddenly loomed up as the leader of a party which so frequently denounced him as a "political traitor" of the deepest dye, and which party he has just as frequently denounced as a mere machine for the registry of the will of the "gold conspirators."

Without descending to meaningless, ranting, demagoguery, the platform puts itself fairly in line with the just demands of labor. It could not have done otherwise for the Democratic party, regardless of all platform utterances, is essentially the party of the people, of whom the laboring elements constitute the great bulk. The chief aim of the National Democracy is to bring back the government to those foundation principles of justice and equality, which during all the earlier days of the Republic constituted its true glory and greatness.

The concluding plank, which deals with the State government, is worthy of the most careful consideration. It invites attention to the splendid record made by our State administrations since the Republican party lost its predominance, and does this for the purpose of meeting the false cry that capital and vested interests generally will be insecure unless the Republican party is in control of the State government. The truth is that while the Democratic party is not like its opponents, the creature of the capitalistic classes, it has never yet aimed an unjust blow at capital, and would protect alike both the rich and the poor. But it makes eternal war upon that policy which shapes all our National legislation to the primary advantage of certain capitalistic classes, leaving labor in all its forms to pick up whatever crumbs it incidentally may—that is such as the favored classes may voluntarily dole out.

So far as this State is concerned the interests of both capital and labor will be best safeguarded by the Democratic and Silver parties, because the policy of these two parties is a policy of western industrial development. Let any Philadelphia capitalist who has invested in Nevada mining properties ask himself how the policy of the Republican party is of advantage to his investment, and if he doesn't have an inward tussle in finding the advantage, then he must be one of those lawyers from the city of brotherly love who are popularly supposed to represent a superlative type of ingenuity. The condition of our mining industry has a most important, almost vital bearing upon all other business in the State and therefore affects the value of all investments.

The Democratic and Silver parties of this State are not composed of anarchists and hobos. They comprise a large percentage of the very best elements of our people. In their councils we find men of brains, and men of wealth, and men who have both brains and wealth—men who are and have been closely identified with its most important interests, who love the State and its people just a little better than they love any other State or any other people. Such are the men who have framed and adopted these two platforms, and they may be relied upon to give Nevada a government, that will mete out equal and exact justice to all who cast their lots with us in the grand work of developing our mines, building up our cities and converting our sagebrush plains and valleys into smiling, productive farms—Journal.
